Kurzweil Educational Systems® Wins 2011 EDDIE Award

Natick, MA- October 24, 2011 – The ComputED Gazette recently named Kurzweil 3000® by Kurzweil Educational Systems® a winner in its 16th Annual 2011 Education Software Review Awards (EDDIE) in the category of High School Special Education. The EDDIE Awards target content-rich and innovative programs and websites that augment classroom curriculum and improve the productivity of teachers. Winners provide parents and teachers with technology that fosters educational excellence and are chosen from titles submitted by publishers worldwide.

Kurzweil 3000 technology provides reading, writing, and test-taking supports for students who have the cognitive ability but not the literacy skills to learn and perform at grade-level, including students with learning disabilities and second language learners.

“We are honored The ComputED Gazette chose Kurzweil 3000 as a 2011 EDDIE Award winner,” said Alex Saltonstall, general manager of Kurzweil Educational Systems. “Recognition from our industry peers supports what we already know—that this program can make a positive difference in the lives of struggling students, enabling them to fulfill their academic and personal aspirations.”

For more than 17 years, The ComputED Gazette has been an online educational resource for educators. Based in the San Diego area, the online publication’s directors are former classroom teachers who have expertise in providing the finest computer education to children and adults.
